

---

Subject: Re: Jus wondering ..

Posted by nikki6ixx on Mon, 17 May 2010 19:38:07 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

GEORGE ZIMMER wrote on Mon, 17 May 2010 14:28nikki6ixx wrote on Mon, 17 May 2010 14:24I don't care what internal politics are going on. What I, and much of the remaining community do care about is when this thing is going to be released. 'Done when it's done' is no longer good enough. Instead of engaging the community, it seems some members of the team prefer to insult those who have legitimate concerns, or repudiate them entirely aka, asking that threads be locked.

Seeing as TT is a project that is supposed to require community support, I'd say its participants ought to be a bit more magnanimous, or at the end of the day, they'll have damaged Renegade as much as 0x90.

I don't think these arguments really do hold anything up, though. Unless EWD pulls an immature move like quitting the TT team because Spooky called him a faggot (not literally, but you know what I mean)- which I doubt he'd do- it's unlikely arguments like this will affect much of TT.

It's not a matter of holding things up. It's a question of the judgement of those that the community has entrusted with this decidedly challenging undertaking. Because we don't get updates, because we don't get to see what's going on, all we can rely on is mere words from people working on the project.

If a team-member comes out on the offensive, and nobody else objects or tries to mediate that response, I, at least, am going to assume the team views the rest of us as a bunch of dummies not worth their time. The response from a couple people who argue that 0x90 can be some sort of asset or ally, and then saying anyone who disagrees is a 'retard' is not good PR, especially when sheer facts overrule their statement in the first place.

On the whole, this affects TT because it only makes people upset. On the internet, people are fickle, so when it's showtime, and the community supposedly votes (how else can we agree) on TT, the results could end up being disappointing.

---