Could you show a video showing exactly what you mean? I would assume that if what you're describing is netcode related, it should also happen for human controlled characters, because I don't think there is a big difference in netcode. A video or something to show exactly what you mean may allow me to give a better guess as to what's causing it though.