I dunno. I think it's more like a cross between Chess and the accordion.

Accordions require at least 300 actions per minute?

Having tried to play one, I'd say so. (For the complex stuff, but then equally I can play stuff on the piano at way less "APM", it just doesn't sound as good)

On the accordion, you need to blow bellows, pick which instruments to imitate (via Church Organ esque "Stops") and press keys to select which notes.

Then I accept the analogy.

Given how widely available keys are now, I doubt that will work, issues of morality aside.
