Involving him in our community, and trying to make a connection with him. That actually may make him think twice about fucking the community over? Yes.

I understand the principle behind wanting him banned. I truly do understand it, but I fear it would be a case of "cutting our nose off, to spite our face".

Maybe my opinion is wrong, but there are very few options available, removing One of them may only serve the purpose of satisfying a principle, making a moral stand, but in reality just shoots us in the foot.

I agree with reborn here, it would do worse to ban 0x90.

He helps out where he can, and doesn't put links up for rgh.

Overall, he's acting very benign, and the attacks against him can be seen a justified from their own light, but I don't think that logic would work.
