WTF! I got up this morning and made myself some breakfast. My breakfast consisted of one bagel with creamcheese with some smoke turkey on top, an apple, and a coffee. Now everything went fine until i got to the apple. I started eating the apple and almost emmediately my lips and gums started to feal weird. It's hard to explain but it was a very uncomfortable fealing. I think I am allergic to apples or something cause my lips started swelling. Several minutes later I started choking and now I can barely talk because I think my throat is swollen. I have noticed this "weird allergic fealing" from eating apples before, but I have never had it this bad. What the hell! Stupid apples. won't be eating any more of those.
