How do you figure? When I buy something I have two choices. Either I have to go out and buy it. Something that has all the draw backs of any commercialized shopping outing. Nothing says easy like traffic, lines and stupid people just to find out they don't have any in stock. Or I can get it online which means I get to wait a week for it assuming the order actually goes through. All so that I can line someones pockets with their over priced item.

On the other side I can simply sit at my computer, fire up that torrent and come back to it in a little while. Keeping my money where it belongs - in my pocket.

The TV industry is smart. They have embraced the internet and found a way to make it work for them and the users. The music industry is just stupid and the movie industry is kinda there but has the edge that people are willing to pay for the quality video.
