AircraftkillerI've decided to change my mind for the time being and I won't be giving away the original tank. They'll be another distinguishing feature I incorporate in my levels.

Even though you fixed it up, it wouldn't be too distinguishing considering someone could just take the original model out of always.dat (The one with the baskets and antennae, not just the regular tank) and fix the lighting/texture problems for themselves.

I know you changed the turret and other things too, but the most distinguishing features are the basket and the antennae - which are in that w3d - so it still wouldn't be an all too amazingly distinguishing tank exclusive to your maps.
