Quote:Potential #1's: Simpee, Mike, Whiskey

And I might as well make a hypothetical list, although I haven't played with anyone recently enough to really know. So a guess:

1. Simpee
2. Mike
3. Whiskey
4. Zell
5. IonCloud
6. Hitman
7. Spooky
8. Kill (could be at the top but only plays when I ask him to lol)

If I missed another clanwar player, my bad, didn't mean to snub ya. Thats all I can think of, who still plays.

i'm not sure why anyone except mike is higher than me on that list tbh, are we still talking about now? the only one on that list who knows nearly as much about strategy and leadership is you, and i can at the very least match anyone there in tanks... maybe a couple of them are better snipers.

In small games... lets say 10 v 10 and smaller and especially in anything less then 5v5s, everyone on that list is better than me (maybe im close to hitman and karmai, but they are probably still better) if we are considering a cw style game.

Once the game starts to get bigger lets say 16v16 and higher, I would say am @ least as effective as most on that list with the exception of flying (I'm not too good at flying.)

The gameplay starts to change once the game gets bigger and different strategies and ideas start to come into play. I have no doubt in smaller games that Spooky and Whisky pretty much have it down what to do but in larger games things are different sometimes.

Not really playing clanwars until about 4-5 years after I first played, it was quite difficult for me to adjust to the strategy of smaller games, and even how tanks were utilized. Smaller games take a lot more strategy while also needing a considerable level of skill to do well in them, and everyone needs to be in sync. I can't remember how many times playing with orca in cws being like "fuck what should we do." It's a lot harder to change the way you are used to playing after playing the game a certain way for that long.

I was never near the top of cw players but at least I was able to be competitive with the top clans and have fun. The games I enjoyed the most, and really were the most competitive, were flying maps where orca would fly and I would snipe. We always would lose more than we would win, but at least we would win occasionally.

I fail @ quoting people btw
