One thing I learned is that there is always someone out there who can turn you inside out and make you feel like a piece of shit. So I grew out of the habit of claiming anything for myself.

WOW...this has been the only thing worth reading in all the years I've been playing Renegade. Thank you for typing this....this should be the fucking Golden Rule of ReneEgo.

thanks! I definitely think so.

However, I also think that not everyone can adopt my same attitude; that would make me a communistic libtard that believes everyone is equal and people shouldn't be rewarded for their skillsets.

I do think that the absolutes in the game are few: there has got to be 1 very good player. There has got to be 1 very good sniper. There has got to be 1 very good pilot. There has got to be 1 very good SBH-hunter, etc etc so on and on. Of course you can have doubles. So when someone does claim to be so, then they are simply opening themselves up to great scrutiny. In that sense we can beat this topic to the death to find out since this is quiet a small community and everyone pretty much knows everyone else.

So for example, when HaTe says he is the best sniper. PERIOD. Then my question is are you good at tunnels (he is and I have seen it), are you good at long range sniping (I honestly don't know), are you a good sniper in a AOW environment? (I don't know about that and I doubt). So there you go, those are the questions that pop up.

In that case i0n seems more of a complete sniper; though I have not seen him play, I can believe what is said about him.

inb4 HaTe lolllol

anyway, the most complete player who is very decent in all the categories should be known as the best player. This way, I think we won't have to deal with the issue of being good only in CW-style vs timed 30 mintute AOW game with bigger teams.

Caveman wrote on Sat, 13 November 2010 10:33You bitched about 0x90 being trusted and I agreed with you however I said if he was to be trusted he could benefit the team whereas anyone could do you 'job' and comment on gameplay balance.

I disagree mate. There is no way I will believe just "anyone" can do Spoony's job in TT and comment on gameplay balance. The guy knows the game inside out, smart at maths, very articulate and is no fool. If anyone wants to compete with that or try to take his position in TT, then I can honestly say that such a person has not made an effort to do so and reveal their talents to the rest of the community (in the way Spooky has done by openly demonstrating his understanding of the game countless times).

Caveman wrote on Sat, 13 November 2010 06:07Be honest now, it was kinda longer then 10secs, ok fine it wasn't exactly 10mins but still you was told multiple times and you just carried on. It was a mistake which happens, therefore that game you wasn't the best rene player.

I don't think a 10 sec lapse in judgment outright disqualifies a person from being the best rene player in 1 game! He did kill HON and OB which automatically makes him so.
