What happened is that at some point, I uploaded a file (containing a really old code dump of 4.0) to a server that was not as secure as I assumed it was. Once I found out that the file wasn't secure, I immediately removed it. Until this leak happened, I was unaware that anyone outside of TT even HAD the source code.

I for one do not intend to let this stop 4.0. After all, Valve had a major leak of the source code to Half-Life 2 and that went on to be a smash hit and one of the most popular FPS games of all time.

We are most definitely not "fucked". The code dump was old and did not contain most of the anti-cheat.

Just to clarify, I read through one of the chat logs, found a url, took the file off, and voila - directory listing. It was in fact the one you're talking about. Just throwing it out there to back up the point it was a simple mistake that was very easy to find.

(Although at that point it just had a build of scripts 4.0 in there, not any source code)
