Subject: Re: Who is the best Renegade player(s) nowadays?
Posted by Spoony on Thu, 02 Dec 2010 21:54:04 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

the point i was making was that had tildeth said what you said, word for word, it wouldn't have looked out of place at all. but again you ignore the main point about how incredibly dishonest and untrustworthy you are

Quote:i am a good player as in i succeed in what i try to achieve nearly every single time, i get most kills just about every game and people are petrified when they see me in their base, trust me... because they know i will tear shit up if they dont come after me with 5 people, even tho i might not be "as good" as you are since i just dont really try to be, im sure i still hold the longest legit MVP winstreak ever(27), and i was quite a noob back then... so by your point of view i was better back then than i was the last year since i actually tried back then... i don't know why you keep trying to reconfigure what i say. when did i place any importance on either a streak of MVPs or how hard you try?

offtopic a little, it would surprise me if my longest consecutive winstreak from non00bs has been beaten yet (92 wins in a row, all in large games) but i only say that cos you mentioned your MVP streak. how many of those 27 games did your team actually win?

Quote:to give an example: you could beat up mike tyson while he is sleepin and claim victory but when he is not asleep im sure u wouldn't be quite as succesfull you've tried this before and you were debunked then too. no, if you want to use this analogy, it would be beating up mike tyson IN A BOXING MATCH because he isn't trying. who gives a shit if he's trying? he came in the boxing match and he lost. if saying he would've beaten you if he tried harder makes him feel better, let him feel better. he still lost and that's the main thing.