I had a fairly big room, and when I was running a much hotter system it heated the room up big style, even with the window open. Whenever the system was off it cooled down to freezing!

In the end I just kept the window open as wide as it would go. Get a 15" fan and point it out the window if you don't have much of a draft through the house/apartment. If you do have a good draft then try and wedge the door higher when it's closed or even shave a bit off the bottom! Makes a huge difference believe me.
