Lets just end this and empty out our wallets on this here table [----] and we'll just distribute this evenly among all of us. Doesn't matter if some of you put in $0 or if some of you put in $1,000...just put it all there and we can all go home with the same amount.

Suppose that the same amount would be enough to get everything one could possibly want, would you be against it in that case as well?

Because the 1000 could buy you perhaps more of everything you'd ever want, but the 0 of course could not.

More ontopic, you know that it takes money to get more money right? This is why the richest 1% of the USA has 34.6% of all the money in the USA. Now I don't mind selfmade people or succesful families, but one has to agree with me that it's odd that some people have enough money to drown them selfs in and others don't even have a drop of drinking water to feed them selfs.

A Harvard business prof and a behavioral economist recently asked more than 5,000 Americans how they thought wealth is distributed in the United States. Most thought that it's more balanced than it actually is. Asked to choose their ideal distribution of wealth, 92% picked one that was even more equitable.

Hell, according to this even you Americans are commie bastards...
