
Subject: Re: Intelligent design vs Evolution

Posted by Starbuzz on Mon, 07 Mar 2011 14:13:44 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

JohnDoe wrote on Mon, 07 March 2011 06:42Starbuzz wrote on Sun, 06 March 2011 18:37
We don't have anything to lose by staying vigilant for the answer instead of prematurely jumping to take a side in a divisive debate.

It makes sense to take this stance on Predator aliens planting humans, but it gets absurd once God is involved.

I don't think it does in the least. What do we have to lose (and gain) when it is indeed a "God?" Which "God" do you mean by that? How do you know who that is? If you see "God" as an ambiguous benevolent being that actually cares for humanity, he/she/it has to realize that by hiding, it is not helping humans find the truth. Unless ofcourse you want me to take a leap of faith and make the assumption. The statement holds within the framework of all rational evidence we have now; for a deity to expect anything more isn't fair.

Compared to the Predators though, if a spiritual force shows up, well, we don't have a chance do we? It still raises the same exact questions.
