For me, it's having a nifty sandbox-type world to screw around in.

And a world where the player isn't infallible, which means effort is required.

Dammit, I was LOOKING for that one.

You're whining about graphics on a forum for a game from 2003? You're a fuckhead if you really think graphics > gameplay. Enjoy your Crysis and Metro 2033.

All this topic was made for was to ask what the big deal about Minecraft was. Upon reading about it and watching videos, it'd be a cool game to play with friends. Playing by yourself, I really don't see the point in the game at all.

Cave exploring by yourself can be pretty terrifying, especially considering the utter desolation.

But yeah, building a whole town by yourself in singleplayer is kinda weird. But eh, to each his own.

Have you done the '404' seed yet? That cave is HARD.
