Honestly? Celebrating his death might seem a little morbid, but it basically gives a message of "If you fuck with us, we will hunt you down, kill you, and then celebrate it."

Besides, men might be created equal, but their actions can easily tip that balance. Personally, I don't feel anyone "deserves" any treatment (good or bad- so saying he "deserved death" is kind of stupid), but I don't think it was wrong to kill him and celebrate his death.
