

---

Subject: Re: What are you currently listening to?

Posted by Aircraftkiller on Tue, 30 Aug 2011 15:41:33 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

My issue with dubstep isn't that it's fundamentally "bad", just that every song is identical to the previous one. They all have the same beats and same styles. The first dubstep songs were great, but like rap music, once it became popular it stopped being unique and quickly became a medium where the same beats became mass-market bullshit.

I've been into Space music for a while now. I end up listening to DI.FM's Space Dreams channel most of my day. To understand my tastes in music, I generally enjoy what's difficult to find. To that end, I find myself enjoying most indie music, regardless of its genre - it's fresh and exciting. Not at all like most things I've heard on the radio waves for the past 15 years. There's something about space music that just really helps my mood and helps me focus on my work, though.

---