Look, buddy. Here's why people are being "antagonizing" to you. That other kid didn't explain it right.

This isn't a server issues forum. If you're here to complain about a specific one, especially St0rm (they're almost universally hated, it would seem), you're not going to get very far. What's the point of ranting to empty space? If you wanted something changed, you could've gone to st0rm.net and took it up with the people that banned you.

But since you're here and all you're doing is whining about a very trivial problem, and blowing it completely out of proportion, you look like a tool. The rationale for this thought process is that you refused to post the grievances you obviously have on the st0rm.net forum, which obviously bother you, which obviously made you post here for some unknown reason.

Now that you're here and you're playing the intellectual superior card, please explain why you were berating others for not having a job, or a wife, or a husband, or children. Most people who have these things and aren't nerds, which all of us are, will not spend any time out of their day posting in obscure video game forums for a decade old, essentially dead, game.

So do you work? I'm curious considering metro Orlando has a roughly estimated unemployment rate of 11%. Seeing as how you're posting during work hours about trivial horse shit, I can assume that you're part of the unemployed and that you're playing Renegade instead of looking for work. Please explain to all of us why you're playing Renegade (and getting quite mad about it as well) instead of getting off of unemployment, you lazy sod.

If you object to this characterization of you, please be assured that I have only come to this conclusion based on your leaps of logic and your inability to construct any kind of argument in support of your topic.