Crimson wrote on Mon, 14 November 2011 01:36 I didn't hack Exodus... lol. I remember being accused of it before but I don't remember what it was all about. And stealing an S2 forum nick? This again implies I know how to hack passwords? If only I were that good at "hacking". I'm much better at defending from attacks/floods/exploits since that happens to me a lot.

After having read this thread for a while, I think now is the appropriate time for me to hop in. I have been the one who discovered the hack back in the day and I know of at least luv2pb's IP (Confirmed using the IPDB) being ALL OVER the Apache access logs logged in as Ethenal, there were multiple other IP's that we couldn't trace back, but I am fairly certain it was confirmed to me by one of your forum moderators that those IP's were also used to access your account on these very forums. I wish I could back this up with logs, but seeing as how A) I don't have access to the Exodus Administrative Sections anymore, where I have shared the proof I've gathered back in the day and B) I am on a new laptop and I don't have my IRC logs on here, I don't think I have anything to share on here.

The fact that you are denying this very thing is very, very sad.

Also.. implying how to hack passwords? Seeing as how the FUDForums show every failed login attempt in the logs with the failed password being shown to the administrator staff.. a single typo could give the password away. I don't know how FUD stores the passwords in the database, if it's plain text (which wouldn't surprise me) there is no need to even hack it as you can just.. read it, and simple md5 encryption has been unsecure for a while.

My honest opinion about this case: You just banned him because you don't want him near you or your servers (that you pay for), it isn't any proactive handling or some shit because he'd take his apparent flooding or other shit towards these forums. Everyone can actually see that. Searching for a rule that wields you enough power in your own so called 'Rules of Conduct' because the original rule doesn't just give you a valid reason to ban Dave is also very, very low.
