It's not TT that is the problem. It's the error messages that XWIS returns that make it unclear to new users what to do (if they didn't read the sticky here)

People that where new had issues with the previous system aswell though (if they didn't read the sticky here), unless they happened to enter a username that wasn't taken, so it doesn't really make much of a difference from the new players' perspective.

The new system atleast gives you a nice list of nicks you have and an easy way to delete them so imo the control panel is a good change.

The ingame WOL error messages need some work though

What TT probably could do, is set the New Account button to point to the control panel.
