If you want to go with analogies.

iran, your analogy doesn't make sense... you're making us sound like hired goons of an evil organization...

If playing on storm servers required players to go bomb other servers or take orders from wilo somehow then yes.. but here it doesn't. He's giving us money sure, but we're not listening to him. In no way does playing there force us to perform any evil actions or listen to anything he says.

When a homeless guy goes to a homeless shelter... he gets the services for free.. he doesn't have to kill someone or do any evil acts to get the services, or even listen to whoever set up the shelter. Same thing here, playing on his server doesn't mean I have to do whatever he tells me lol. If he tried that we'd just ragequit his server forever. Hence my analogy works way better. We're more like innocent people who are served by evil but aren't doing anything evil...
