But mods such as the veteran system proved to be fresh and fun during those long marathon games, and there actually was a lot of teamwork in the majority of games, with lots of good players. Games were highly enjoyable. Now it's gone, I'm not sure what server to play in, namely one that uses scripts 4.

Then you'll enjoy Atomix AOW considering the mod that was ran on St0rm was my mod that was ran on Atomix before I shut it down. I re-opened it when I left st0rm. And also, we use scripts 4.0.

Jelly has always been the alternative, but it's always been slightly laggy for me, and there seems to be alot of n00bs that arty where all game, with little teamwork.

Jelly has its times where the noobs come out and play. Overall if you want something close to pure ren, it's either Jelly or noobstories.

What i care for is just playing a good game of renegade, and i really think, especially renegade being 10 years old and how many of us are left, this entire community should really band together, and try and run things simultaneously. Not be so divided.

That's what we're doing. We're all connected in some way. The only thing is we diversified ourself away from st0rm due to Wilo being the sorrounding of it. If people really wanted to fix their issue, they would of voted Wilo off, he could of stepped down peacefully, or he shouldn't of fucked other people over in the first place.
