
Subject: TRTA LIVES!!!

Posted by warranto on Thu, 11 Sep 2003 22:10:32 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

AdavanzeThey are known more as levels for single player and maps for multiplayer... And i wouldnt call me "some 13 year old" you dont have a clue what i do... All you do is sit on ur fat ass and make maps, sure they are good!

The subject has totally changed... i cant get sued... And no one owns that alien design.

It has been used thosands of times, and happened to be in a popular movie, doesnt mean i can get sued. Think of it like this:

I go to court because i made a 3d model of an alien WITH FUCKING FAT HEAD....

The makers of Alien have to come to England to see me....

I wont get sued for making the model cauz ITS A FUCKING HEAD!

= hahahahaha, fuck this! I cant get sued for it, the maker is some german guy who had nothing to do with the movie alien, therefore making the movie ALIEN not have copyright laws... so they could have been sued for it if the dead dude was alive.

ACK, you call me an idiot, but just read your posts. You are the fucking idiot... You think you just know everything.... And i wouldnt say your reputation isnt a big issue, if like you didnt have any reputation then your life would be a fucking wreck!

Can we maybe just get back to the topic... or even DELETE this thread!

Uhh... and since when did you start knowing so much about the law?

Quote:The subject has totally changed... i cant get sued... And no one owns that alien design.

20th Century Fox owns the rights to the "Alien" series. That includes the soundtrack, the character names, and yes even the Alien designs.

Quote:It has been used thosands of times, and happened to be in a popular movie, doesnt mean i can get sued. Think of it like this:

I go to court because i made a 3d model of an alien WITH FUCKING FAT HEAD....

The makers of Alien have to come to England to see me....

I wont get sued for making the model cauz ITS A FUCKING HEAD!

Thousands of times? Really? Please show us where it has been used even once! And it's not just the head, it's the entire body. The only major difference is that yours is standing straight up, while the movie creations are seen hunched over when standing erect. Search the web, you'll find all sorts of pictures of the movie that support what I say.

Quote: cant get sued for it, the maker is some german guy who had nothing to do with the movie alien, therefore making the movie ALIEN not have copyright laws... so they could have been sued for it if the dead dude was alive.

Can't comment on whether or not the original creator was German, but if 20th Century Fox had mad the movie without the concent of the current owner of the design rights, some people would be VERY rich right now. You see, there is this thing called a copyright. And even if the person is dead, the copyright can still exist for another 75 (not sure on the exact number of years) after the persons death, unless the title is transferred (which is usually the case). In either case, if the copyright had been owned by someone else at the time of the movies production, a lawyer would have sued on behalf of the owner (had he been dead at the time and not transferred ownership). However, if the copyright had expired, then Fox could have simply taken up the rights when they made the movie. However seeing as there was no lawsuit (as another 4 movies were made) it's fair enough to say that if the Alien design wasn't originally created for Fox, that they obtained the rights to use them.

Quote:ACK, you call me an idiot,

After reading this garbage you posted, I'd say he's right.
