

---

Subject: OT: The RIAA

Posted by setstyle on Sat, 13 Sep 2003 00:13:21 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

The RIAA's just in a fit because people naturally seek to bypass the outrageous prices set by the industry. I can sum it up in one word: Greed. How the hell am I supposed to hear a band's sound if I can't hear the songs? CD stores' sampling machines aren't always an option, since they often carry only whatever's "cool" at the time (which I usually look down upon). Some sites may have samples, but that could be the best/worst song on the album, leaving me with little understanding of it as a whole. If that "copyrighted material" is really good, and merchandise isn't overpriced (yeah right), I may even buy some stuff. If I don't like it, I'm obviously not going to let it on my computer and listen to it.

---