

---

Subject: Re: The Avengers *Spoilers Maybe*

Posted by TheBeerinator on Wed, 27 Jun 2012 18:27:08 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

liquidv2 wrote on Wed, 27 June 2012 08:52in unarmed combat, do you think a krav maga person would beat a MMA person, assuming they were both trained?

if you're arguing unarmed person vs. a weapons-trained + weapons-armed person, you're not having the same conversation whatsoever

MMA fighters are trained to fight opponents within certain rules.

Here are the basics of Krav Maga, taken from the wiki:

Quote:General principles include:[1]Counter attacking as soon as possible (or attacking preemptively).

Targeting attacks to the body's most vulnerable points such as the eyes, jaw, throat, solar plexus, ribs, groin, knee, armpits etc.

Neutralizing the opponent as quickly as possible by responding with an unbroken, varied stream of counter attacks (i.e. attacking high/low) and if necessary a take down/joint break.

Maintaining awareness of surroundings while dealing with the threat in order to look for escape routes, further attackers, objects that could be used to defend or help attack and so onThere pretty much are no rules.

---