Oh, I'm sorry, apparently celebrities fall under different laws that I do. Read warranto's post. He knows what he's talking about.

The most recent site I had shut down was <http://unknowncheats.homeip.net/> -- I reported them to DynDNS and they informed me that "This user's accounts have been terminated for their violations of our AUP."

Now the dynamic IP resolves to a 10.x.x.x IP which basically doesn't let you connect to it since 10. is reserved for local IPs.

Now you're trying to wriggle out of it by saying "oh, it's just funny". Yeah, ruining the game for hundreds of gamers is HILARIOUS!!! Suuuure.

Seriously, go away. Now.
