Yeah, I know right? However, it's so much more fun to permaban people for pitiful offenses than actually do something that takes care of the problem. You have to remember, this is Renegade - and all moderators of inactive servers love to showcase the throbbing veins of their e-penises and kickban people for using R-G-H 5.- ahem, spamming radio commands. It gets them laid in real life. A lot.

Stop using my term you wanker. Lose the hostnick, lets see how long your retarded server stays alive. With shitty mods like your own, I don't think it will for long. It'll be just like <insert some random name here>. dead

I find that whole thing laughable there. You guys give your little cheaters second chances, third chances, fourth chances...and allow cheaty skins that used to be banned. The "inactive servers" as you put it, do their best to get rid of cheaters.

Wow, I forgot people LIKE to play on servers that they're banned for life on for making mistakes, instead of being allowed to play after a reasonable amount of time under the conditions they run 4.0 (if they were banned for cheating, anyway). Or of course, for instance, simply muting people for spamming radio commands instead of permanently banning them for "crashing the server" (but of course, our dedicated server isn't so puny as to not be able to handle radio commands, lol). We COULD do that, but we actually enjoy having a full server. Evidently, we're the only ones.

Also, we've always been quite lenient in our allowance of skins. GrimmNL (an old moderator) even had his own skins section of the website in which he made/uploaded many skins that would be considered blatant advantage skins on other servers. I suppose that's bad, but evidently the players appreciate it...

I think you got "removing cheaters" with "removing players." You know, hence my use of the term "inactive."
