I just read through this and knowing a lot of you quite well I'm shocked at how personal and sadistic some of these posts are. First of all I'm used to bringing up personal lives to try to get a rise out of them but this has been taken to new extremes and crossed many lines.

Seriously trying to get someone struggling in their workplace fired simply because you can. Who gives a fuck if they posted complaining about their job. Many people do that. It doesn't mean you just go ahead and exploit them and try to get them terminated.

Second I don't appreciate personal grudges and fights on this forum reflecting negatively on RenCorner. We have been working hard to make a renegade community people enjoy and have fun at. We have been quite successful at getting a decent player base in game and on forums. We have also recently started doing community wars that have always been 8 v 8s or greater and it is starting to bring the community together more.

I ask that what ever person grudges you hold against any of our moderators or administrators you do not call RenCorner down because of it. We are all part of some of the few communities left. We should be working together not trying to have some competition over who can get more players. The most important thing is getting the new players to return.

I did not make a post to start a flame war with any of you, but there have been many things said that are completely immature and have no purpose except to hurt another person.

Thanks,

-Volcom
