You mean like the process of bills etc. having to be passed through congress? I don't and never thought that the president could just do things without congress that's not at all what I meant to say before with the first post. Actually i know a bit more about how the US politics works than i do about Canada's but I didn't mean to preach that Obama is 'doing these things' in that sort of way.

For example from my research I believe that the same group of people who were in control when bush was in office are still in control now. Nothing significant has changed since than only a small illusion of small things, so i know it's more than Obama himself also I believe that Canada and some other countries is under much the same control as the United States, there's only small differences it seems and as your health care system declines, so does ours and it has been.
