LOL, biggest party maybe, but to become prime minister he'll either need to have 75 seats in parliament or finds a party that wants to form a coalition. After his last joke at the expense of the VDD and the CDA, there are not much candidates left for such coalition.

"maybe", you mean literally the largest party?

That's what the media and parties said before his weak coalition with the VVD and the CDA. The CDA was one of their biggest detractors yet they still formed a weak coalition.

It will most likely be PVV + SP + some small fringe party (which would love to be part of a coalition as a display of power). The SP and PVV need each other and their left-wing economic and part social policies overlap. Goat fuckers and other third world scum mostly vote PvdA (and comically are forming their own muslim parties in Rotterdam), so the SP won't have much issue with any PVV policy. The SP are increasingly Euro-skeptic.

There is no other coalition possible other than one with 5 parties, which obviously can't lead anything ideologically.

NO ONE will form a coalition with the PvdA nor VVD, no one wants to associate themselves with them. Will be interesting in how things will turn out.
