Thank you for all the hours of work you've both put in as well as all the help you provided to Renegade players both in public and private.

BlackIntel was like a breath of fresh air in the Renegade community and I think most of us remember BIATCH and the help it provided in finding cheaters.

You guys had the skill and attitudes to help the community move forward and you did. Joining TT was perhaps inevitable as it was/is the main force for improving the game.

The work you did is something you can be proud of. TT has brought Renegade to another level, the map downloader alone was something the game needed since it was released. Not to mention all the various bugs that tormented players for years on end.

You were passionate about the game and made it better for all of us.

Farewell.
