The guy denied his drug and organized crime connections until now (fun fact: Ford and his hitman/dealer Sandro Lisi are currently being investigated in connection to a murder), and he will probably continue to do so once he completes his bullshit 28-day "rehab". He's an embarrassment to the city of Toronto and to Canada.

The best outcome of this whole affair would be if he dropped dead of a massive heart attack.

When the media attacks someone it's not because they're bad it's actually the other way around. If you're still trusting the mainstream media you need to do research on the Internet something that is free and not controlled by the corrupt wealthy elite who controls mainstream media and politics.

The media attacked Michael Jackson and looked what happened there it turned out to be all a lie if you do some research you'll find out why the media really attacked him and you'll be shocked to actually learn something. But it's a shame that many people are just too ignorant to be more open minded about things they hear from for example the Mainstream media.

I'm not standing up for Rob Ford specifically but if you knew what other politicians were secretly involved in you wouldn't be focusing hatred towards him because his wrong doings don't come close by a long long shot to the darkness that other politicians do. Part of that darkness is making sure they look good in the public eye like for example doing a photo shoot holding a baby with a smile on his face to make the politician look like a good person to fool people because the majority of a misled public eat that up. I wish it wasn't true and I wish I was joking but you'll find out eventually that it is. Almost everything you see when it comes to politicians looking like great caring people whether it be Mayors, Statesmen, Provincial, Prime Minister, President... is an illusion that they present to the public so that they can continue doing their dirty work behind behind closed doors
