Quote:British Psychological Society's annual conference in Dublin, Ireland, yesterday, saying that the closer gamers were to being addicted to their hobby, the more likely they were to display "negative personality traits." Specifically, the pair spotted increased neuroticism, lack of extraversion, and lack of agreeableness.

Hate to say it, but I think they failed to noticed that people who play computer games all day long will be less socially developed BECAUSE they play computer games all day long.
