To be honest I agree with a little bit of everyone.

On one side you have Blaze and Jelly producing an "anticheat" in mod form. Though it does cut down a lot of the major cheats, it is still a mod and has variables that are not the same as the original packages.

On the other you have Renguard which has not produced anything yet.

There is only one true hardcore FACT here: Blaze and Jelly were the first ones to produce SOMETHING that lessens the effect of the cheats. And for that I applaud you.

It may not be the best solution, but it's sure as hell a step that no one else has taken.

I just hope someone produces a quality anticheat soon.
