
Subject: C&C Airbase Preveiw

Posted by exnyte on Thu, 16 Oct 2003 21:58:46 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

kylej03hey orca, the pic of the aircraft, second to last. Is a Harrier, Not an A-10.....An A-10 cant hover, only a Harrier can, e-mail me @ kylej03@verizon.net to get more

The A-10 may not be able to hover quite like the Harrier, but it can come pretty close.

Example:

Quote:The A-10, built in the 1970s by Fairchild Industries, skims the ground at lower than 1,000 in altitude, can nearly hover over the battlefield, and spews out almost 4,000 rounds of armor-penetrating bullets per minute. (These are also the weapons coated with depleted uranium that have irradiated so much of Iraq and Afghanistan.) Pilots love the plane because it is easy to fly and safe: the cockpit is sealed in a titanium shell to protect the pilot from groundfire, it has a bulky but sturdy frame, three sets of back up controls and a foam-filled fuel tank.

Info from: <http://www.rense.com/general38/a10.htm>
