I'm Sorry.
I tried typing this out for two hours.
Still got nothing.
Guess im...speechless? not that people have to make speechs to seem important and such.
I acctually signed up on the Renegade Public Forums beccause of this...
Okay here goes...

I didn't know Lynne, and i dont really know Aircraftkiller all that well...
I know she played Renegade, since i remember seeing her in some games.
But no i cant really say i knew her, and i cant really say i know Ack.
So why am i posting here...? maybe, Maybe its because i feel sorry, because i know how it feels to lose people.
And maybe its because im just an overly emotional forum-twit...but thats just me...

I always get sad when i hear that someone died, i was depressed as hell when Trey_D died, since i remember being in a game of Renegade with him, repairing his tank, and he said "Thank you" that always makes a person feel appreciated when they are told "Thank you" even if its just "ty" it still goes a long long way, and even if the other one was just saying it to be kind, it still means a lot.

Well look at me, im all weepy here, and such...

I think, people...just everyone share somekind of connection to each other, and when someone close to someone dies and you hear about it, you feel sorry, and such.
I mean i do not know Ack that well (at all), and i didn't know Lynne, but i still feel sad.
Maybe its just me, or...Whatever...i just do feel sad because Lynne died, and i do feel sorry for Ack since he lost someone close to him, and i do know what that feels like, and any fucktard who comes in here on a warpath because they dont like AircraftKiller, Screw them, if they post here, hell-bent on sounding cool, and hip and dissin' Ack, i will personally tear them two new ones with one Big ass sword of Doom.

(And screw my typing skills)
