This is what I wrote on the Pits forum, so bear with me here.

Umbral927This is a quick poem I wrote in her memory, after I had a haunting dream when I fell asleep at my keyboard. I was reading her blogspot, when she was commenting on the dreams of her mother beckoning for her....this time, she was beckoning for me...

In anycase, here's the poem:

Anthony ClarosIn my Dreams

The wind shakes the leaves as the sun disappears in the obscure horizon I think of her, her radiant smile that illuminates the world, her heart which could hold the love of all humanity, the eyes that sparkled with the joy and friendship of a mockingbird's lullabies
I shall only see
In my Dreams.

The spirits you lifted the people you touched the companionship you provided to those in need Shall never be felt again I hope they can see you as I can see you
In my Dreams

The taste of salt in my mouth is the aftertaste left from my flowing tears After losing you
You put up a good fight against unsurmountable odds but now, the only place I can feel the warm glow of your presence is
In my Dreams

Jesus, I'm sobbing as I type this. Excuse me while I get a tissue.
