tHz2HMM, insulting servicefolk. Posibly I caused insult to a serviceman, but I haven't struck out at any profession. That would like visiting everyone in my direct famlily expect from my sister and grandmother then spitting on their unforms. Why don't you simmer down and read more carefuly next time.
I'm curious though, what do you guys do now? And if you dont mind me asking, how long was your service, and why'd you leave?
Well I guess I have to S-P-E-L-L it out for you. You may not have intended (though I'm beginning to doubt it), and I'm sure you don't think that you've insulted anyone, but you have whether you think so or not. That was my point, that unless you are or have been a serviceman, you would not understand. Believe me, I would'nt have bothered typing all that if I had not read all the posts "carefully". To sum it up, the point is that whether or not you think you've insulted anyone, you have.
tHz2Quote:
Once a Marine always a Marine, boot camp was longer and tougher back when I went in, after about a week I thought I was gonna die...LOL. It was one of the toughest and one of the best times in my life. It did wonders for many of us that thought we were "tough", learned very quickly that we weren't. I served as a combat engineer specializing in explosives.

And now you sit on your ass playing games and getting fat.
No offence, but why?

btw..."combat engineer" is that the technical term lol.
Maybe you should learn to read more carefully, and who the hell are you, Doug, to question what anyone here does and why? Are you going to tell me that your remarks were directed specifically at Jarhead, or at any serviceman who happens to play Renegade and use these forums?