Because I don't get paid, and I don't have a dedicated beta testing team - so my maps will need updates, like any other map would if bugs were found. Be happy that I take my own time to actually fix errors instead of leave them and move on.

Well, you just answered your own question with that second statement... That's exactly the way it is for me, but I still strive for perfection even if this is for fun.

If you don't like the way the community is, then change it. Don't whine and complain that things aren't going your way - do something about it. Get people to do what you want them to do, and others will follow.
