I think there is a slight misunderstanding on what is "wrong" and what is "gay". MrPirate said it, I believe, that the act of sex should be only between a man and a woman, and that is true for the reasons he stated. Now, you can be gay, and not have sex. It's entirely possible -- but that is in no way wrong. The Catholic religion (at least) accepts gay people, however frowns upon the act of sex in a gay relationship. That is viewed as "wrong" as far as the Church goes. Of course, you can be a hypocrite and say that you think all gay people (and no, you don't have to be intimate with the same sex to be gay) are morally "wrong", but as Aircraftkiller said, you can't tell people what to feel.
