Speaking as kindly as I can, Generals is a lame excuse for a soggy pile of flaming dog shit that EA is trying to pass off as a C&C game, so that they can distract C&C fans from their brainless lack of a conclusion to the series' original plot line. I'd rather they just let C&C retire in peace instead of ruining it with that mindless moose piss called Generals.

That said, the next game, if there is one, had better be Tiberian, and it had better not be as much of a damned pushover to beat as RA2 and YR were. As in, MORE than 12 pathetic levels, and a hard setting that is more challenging than flipping a light switch.

It won't be Westwood, so it will already be an uphill battle for their marketing team as far as my wallet is concerned.
