If you are so afraid to give that information out, why enter? If he wanted it that bad for any reasons other than what he stated, he could simply inform you that you won the contest, get the same information, and then give you nothing. It's not like this is some no name person from out of the blue, and I know you've been around long enough to know who Dante is. I'm sure the same thing will happen to your information that happens to all unused submissions, recycle bin (or equivalent). And as with any other person/company asking for your personal information, you can in turn request it not be used for any other purposes.
