It all hinges on this statement:

"Before he left, the Marines had offered Sellers a desk job at the Marine Corps Air Ground Combat Center in Twentynine Palms, a small desert town 140 miles east of Los Angeles.

But Sellers had been training for months as second in command of the 3rd Light Armored Reconnaissance Battalion, and he said he was concerned about bringing in a new member so late in the training. "

Are you telling me that this is the reason to leave a dying son?

What happens if he gets killed in combat? I bet the Corps would replace him in 10 Seconds with a spot promotion. He had orders to still support the corps, AND be with his family.
