Awe you didn't explain it too it's greatness.

It starts off with a tiny space based landing craft heading towards the derelict science vessel. They force the door open and a Ghost leads in like five marines into a tiny central room. He looks around and removes his special trinoculars and looks around. The marines set down the cold fusion bomb and then one presses the button. After opening the case you see a cold fusion bomb on ice with some beers in it.

After it opens you hear one of the marines say "Thank God for cold fusion." They talk casually for a few seconds and one marine says after opening his beer. "I got your Zerg right here hehe." which right after saying that his face explodes with a scythe coming through it. The Hydralisk that kills him drags the twitching body to the ceiling causing the other marines and ghost to get there weapons ready.

They see the zerg coming down the hallways and begin the best cutscene firefight I have ever seen. You hear screaming, guns blazing, and just greatness in this cinematic and after the Hydralisk dropped one of the marines the ghost spazs and hits the button blowing the Vessel to pieces.

Now I will try that installation thing and hope it works but if it doesn't I might go with the DVD.
