

---

Subject: "I dislike you"

Posted by exnyte on Sun, 22 Feb 2004 06:20:24 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

msgtpainand you don't see who caused the thread to be hijacked? Do you honestly think that any one of those other people would have given a fuck about someone saying "skinner".. no.. the argument was started (and kept alive) but one person.. The same person that does it every single time..

ACK didn't start the argument... He only stated his opinion on what he thought the term should be. What started the argument was everyone else chiming in telling him he's wrong. It wasn't kept alive by only him, as you said yourself:

msgtpaineveryone else continues on in the thread arguing about if there is or isn't such a word as a skinner..

That is what kept the argument alive.

msgtpainHe wants me to stop because it's becoming hateful and vengeful and bringing a whole lot of people in to the conversation that he would rather remain "behind the scenes"

Or did it ever occur to you that maybe he wants you to stop because it's difficult to remain friends with someone who fights him at every turn? Nobody wants to fight, especially in public, with friends. You may want to think about that.

msgtpainAs long as he pokes his nose in every single thread to make a spiteful comment, I'll be right along behind to spite him back.

Or what you could also do is just let him do what he wants, and keep to yourself. Everyone should take this advice. If people didn't react to his comments about things, however off topic they may be, there wouldn't be a 3-4 page flamewar afterwards would there... This goes back to the same "original" topic this stemmed from. AAK625 never acknowledged ACK's comment, so why should anyone else have? If I made the same exact comment, in the same exact spot, I could almost assure you that there wouldn't have been the ensuing argument afterwards. The only reason it went on as long as it did is because others seem to respond, just to fight with ACK. Just like you keep doing. I personally thought ACK's comment:

Aircraftkiller - for those who aren't paying attentionSkinner remove the skin of animals... Texture artists create texture maps for 3D games.

Was humorous actually. Really people. He just stated his opinion on the subject (not the topic), and I doubt it was posted just to start a 3-4 page argument on the subject. That's the difference. You seem to think it was. Do you honestly think that following him around just to "spite" him is really worth while? What will it accomplish? What makes you think after long, knowing what I've observed of ACK, he won't just start doing things just to give you something to spite about. This is one of those things that should just be dropped and left alone. It's already obvious that a friendship is already dancing along the edge. Why push it? It seems right now, that your only goal is to piss him off to the point of hating you. Then what? He still won't have changed, you've lost a friend, and now you argue about everything just because he's him, and you're you. All makes it worth while doesn't it?

---