

---

Subject: Wall Papers

Posted by cheesesoda on Thu, 18 Mar 2004 23:22:26 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

hell no ps isn't more important than my school work. i'm just saying that when i don't care about something, i don't do it. so therefore, everything that i do, i care about. i don't plan on failing out of high school. i am and have been planning to go to college and major in business. i want to own my own company, possibly something related to computers. I have no clue what i truly want to do, but that's what i have been leaning towards. i agree that education is important and it's gonna take u farther than any amount of experience with graphics and computers. i respect those who can make a good living off of computers, but i don't expect myself to be that way.

it did sound like i was tryin to ride my experience, but it was to let people know why i am not in the running for best graphic designer. i am using this thread for showing off. i have been showing off what i've learned so far...i just have gotten the feeling that people are looking down their noses at me because i can't produce what they can.

i don't mind being judged, but when i'm being ranked against people, it makes me feel uncomfortable because it makes me feel like people are trying to show that i am lower than others. i could care less that i am, but i really don't feel the need to have it pointed out to me.

this all sounds like i'm trying to complain, but i truly am not. sorry if it has sounded like i am.

---