

---

Subject: Oh Hareman...

Posted by KIRBY098 on Fri, 19 Mar 2004 19:01:49 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

haremanBut wait you guys couldn't about that. You only care if someone else is dying for your principles ... like the Spanish? Oh. thats right fuck them they don't want to have anything to do with 'Shrub's' campaign on terror. they only want to have peace and be left alone.

But all that is ok if you get elected President.

I put my own life on the line to defend those principles in the very same arenas. Don't lecture me on others doing it for me. I did it for them, they can do it for me.

The Spanish will suffer just as every other country will. Russia, Bosnia, France, Britain, etc, etc, etc... They will all suffer for thier hold to Western principles of freedom. Freedom has a price.

The Spanish decision to bail on the war on terror is weakness in it's most pathetic form. What if American soldiers had given up and said "we just want to live in peace and be left alone." in WW2?

Stand up for what is right, and good. Sacrifice for the greater good, and screw your self interest.

Also, the man Bush was is CLEARLY not the man he is now. He is a man tested by the fire of the reality of a world at war. This election is not about 40 year old screwups. It's about finishing what we've started. Bush is the man for the job.

School systems EVERYWHERE are screwed. Not just Texas. And corporate interests will always take advantage of public. It is not his fault greed pervades a capitalist society.

Clinton was, and is still a weasel.

How many times has GW disgraced the oval office with interns, and cigars? How many times has he cheated on his wife? How often has he faced inquiry and possible impeachment? He believes in being accountable to God for what he does here as leader of a country BASED on Christian principles.

See, that's the difference and I think Democrats would do well not to compare a tail hunting, turncoat with a man who has such high standards.

---