

---

Subject: Oh Hareman...

Posted by cheesesoda on Mon, 22 Mar 2004 18:36:11 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

OK, i made it sound wrong. God does not promote war, but fighting a just war is not sinning. He doesn't want his children to die, but for the righetous to be victorious in the fight against temptation and sin.

Let's make this a little bit of a smaller picture, shall we. Say you're being attacked by someone, so your response is defense. Your defense might just be violence. Now that doesn't mean that God is promoting violence, but you are simply protecting your "temple." You are instructed to keep your body, your temple, healthy and etc... Same as in the war, we are protecting each other, so you could say that we're protecting everyone's "temple." We were attacked, so we are defending ourselves from future attacks.

If that's so, why don't we just attack the terrorist groups who are attacking us instead of political leaders? Easy, It's like a drug ring, if you take out the dealers, the drug lords are just going to hire more. Instead of having to arrest dealer after dealer, which will make no progress in your fight against drugs, you go straight for the drug lords themselves. You attack the ones who are fueling everything along with the dealers as well.

---