I know I'm just generalizing here, but I can't seem to get away from stupid idiots. I encounter them everywhere, at work, at school, on the road, during recreation, on message boards, everywhere. I overhear people talking about their dumbass decisions who are actually bragging about them. People get in my way all the time. They can't type out a complete sentence or use capital letters. They drink away all their problems instead of solve them. They're completely self-centered and shallow. They have tons of biasies that they can't legitimately support for the life of them once you question them.

Sorry about the rant here, some days are worse than others and this one was a bad one. Feel free to talk about some recent encounters you've had with complete dumbasses. And please stay out if you are a dumbass yourself (you use "1337speak, abbreviate with numbers, or spam all the time because you have no life and nothing better to do).

In general I'd say about 70% of the human population consists of dumbasses.

I can't think of anything else to add. I will however present any recent encounters of dumbasses whenever I get the chance to. Feel free to do the same.

Oh yeah, one more thing, I hate John Kerry. He looks like a manipulative asshole, so he probably is one.
