I have another story that just happened today with an idiotic driver. On the same road as the one I experienced earlier, some moron decided to sneak his TRUCK in between my car and a jeep. He did not have much clearance, I would estimate that he had about 5' of clearance between both of my car and the jeep. If he would have hit his brakes just after he moved over, there would have been no doubt that there would have been an accident and since I would have technically hit him, I would have gotten the ticket.
